

Christian Beaudoin

Director, Americas Research and Strategy, JLL

Christian Beaudoin is a Director of Research and Strategy for JLL in the Americas, focused on the Central Region and Corporate Occupier Clients. He manages a team of research analysts covering market dynamics in office, industrial, multifamily, and retail properties. He drives industry-leading research and analysis on economics, real estate development, and market conditions. He has led several publications on real estate strategy and trends, including JLL's 2013 and 2015 Global Real Estate Surveys.

Christian advises many of the world's largest organizations across multiple industries – including banking, consumer products, high-tech and government - on real estate strategy and development. He is currently serving as an Advisor to the Obama Foundation on the planning, design, and development of the Obama Presidential Center. He has presented at ULI, CoreNet, IFMA, and related real estate association events and authored published papers on real estate trends, innovation, and strategy.

At JLL, Christian has served as a National Director in JLL's Project & Development Services business. He led a team of over 40 people, delivering capital projects globally for some of our largest corporate and private clients. He also served as Research Director for our Corporate Solutions business, with a focus on corporate strategy and global growth opportunities.

Prior to joining JLL, Christian was a program manager and director of research and strategy at Siemens Corporation, reporting directly to the CEO of the Americas. Earlier in his career, he worked in asset management at Starwood Capital (ST Residential), and was a consulting structural engineer managing the design and development of large-scale construction projects around the world.